

It was a dark and solemn hour when the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lattie Baldwin and took a precious little jewel from the home.

The little one was only about four months old when death claimed it.

It was sad to part with the baby, but it is gone from a world of sorrow and sadness, to a heaven of peace and love.

We should not grieve for the little one, although it almost breaks our heart to part with such pure little hearts. But our Savior is going to care for all such jewels as this was.

Jesus said, we must become as little children if we enter the kingdom of God.

This leaves father, mother, two sisters, and a host of friends to mourn the sad departure of the little babe. We want to extend our greatest sympathy to the bereaved ones.

"Let little children come unto me," the loving Savior said, and in his arms they'll always be, when graves give up their dead.
