

Hannah Henry, Wife Of John
Henry And Infant Died
August 3rd.

Hannah Henry and infant, wife and child of John Henry of Marshall, died August, 3. All who knew Mrs. Henry say she was an excellent woman. She was buried at the brick Church near Leicester, her old home.

John has lived around Marshall all his life, and is a good citizen. He is one out of three or four colored voters in Madison County. He has been in the employ of the Southern Railway at the station for about twelve years. John is the son of Lonnie Henry who died at Marshall a few years ago. Lonnie was one of the old school, and was in great favor with the people of Marshall. Lonnie reared a large family, and they all bear a good name. We are reminded of the little poem of Robert Burns, "A man's a man for ae' that."

The man or woman with black skin may have just as good heart may be just as honest, and as good citizen as the man or woman with white skin. Notwithstanding all the theories, we are all God's creatures. It is a fact, often we find some of the kindest and tender hearted people among the colored race. Sympathetic kindness is one of the characteristics of the negro race.
